> The Fallacy of Secession further considered.

On Tuesday last, we presented a part the great argument of Mr. WEBSTER on the resolutions of Mr. Calhoux in the U. S. Senate in 1833, asserting the right of sec asion, in which that doctrine was successfully copy of that of Massachusetts, only changing refuted. The course of the country at that son conformed to the theory of the Federal the name and in behalf of the people of Vir-Constitution propounded by Mr. WEBSTER. ginin, declare and make known, that the . . . as everybody knows, and the people at large sustained it, in opposition to the South Carelima a sertion. The notion was then so fully and thoroughly exploded, that no respectable State-man, outside of South Carolina, wa found to contend seriously for it for about a quarter of a century. But the arguments b which it was throttled having, in a great measure, passed out of mind, or never baving been addressed to the present generation of the masses of the people, the fallacy is again insisted upon, with redoubled energy and i being pressed to the point of diss lying the government. We propose now to havite a tention to the facts which attended the submission of the Constitution to the people. mission of the Constitution to the people, parity of our natentions, and under the conand the manner and form of its adoption viction t at who soeved importations may exviction t at who soeved importations may ex-

It connect d to the first place from the people, and was retered back to them for their acceptance. Previously a confederated Union between the States had existed, and now it was proposed to change that Union, and make it one embracing the whole people, as such. That this was the view and intention of the Convention is fully manifested by the following extract of a letter to the Congress of the confederation accompanying the Constitution, which was prepared under an order of the Convention, approved by the members, and signed by

"It is obviously impracticable, in the federal government of these States, to secure all rights of independent sovereignty to each and yet provide for the interest and safety of all. Individuals entering into society must give up a share of liberty to preserve the *The magnitude of the sacrifice must depend as well on situation and circumstances, as on the object to be obtained. It is at all times difficult to draw with precision the line between those rights which must be sur-, and those which may be reserved And on the present occasion this difficulty was increased by a difference among the different States, as to their situation, extent, habits and particular interests. "In all our deliberations on this subject we kept steadily in nor view that which appeared to us the greatest interest of every true American, the consolidation of the Unique in which is involved our prosperity, felicity, salety, perhaps our hatforal existence. This important consideration, seriously and deeply impressed on our minds, led each Stat in the convention to be less rigid in points of inferior magnitude, than might have been otherwise expected .- And thus the constitotion which we now present, is the result of a spirit of amity, and of that mutual deference and concession, which the peculiarity of our political situation rendered indis ensable. That it will meet the full and entire approbation of every State is not, perhaps, to be expected. But each will doubtless consider, that had her interest alone been consalted, the consequences might have been particularly disagreeable and injurious to others. That it is liable to as few exceptions as could reasonably have been expected, we hope and believe; that it may promote the lasting welfare of that country so dear to us all, and secure her freedom and happiness, is our most ardent wish." In accordance with the recommendation of the Convention, the Congress resolved that the constitution and the above letter should be sent to the several State Legislatures, and be by them submitted to conven tions of delegates chosen by the people of the States. This was done, and we append the ratification of the twelve States first coming faits the Union, and the language

The Issue. The question before the people of Tennes see now is - not what Tonnessee shall do in the event of a dissolution of the Union, but what shall she do to preserve the Union and restore it to tranquility? I suppose no so- bined use of the two is said to result favorable in all ber mind doubts that it would be better for cases.
